Pierre Caye

Qu'est-ce qu'un développement vraiment durable ? What's a truly sustainable development ?

Thursday 29.06.23, 18h30 grand amphithéâtre Bossard, ENSAP de Lille.

(conférence en français, with simultaneous translation in English)

Pierre Caye, philosopher, is director of research at the CNRS. He founded the international research group «Savoirs artistiques et traités d'art de la Renaissance aux Lumières».

Former student of the École Normale Supérieure (Ulm), he has been developing for over 30 years research on the knowledge of architecture, urbanism and regional planning, and through these, on the question of technique, renewing thoroughly the genealogy of it, notably in: Durer. Elements pour la transformation du système productif (Belles Lettres, 2020). Other key publications include: Critique de la destruction créatrice. Humanisme et production, Paris, Les Belles Lettres, 2015; and Morale et chaos. Principes d'un agir sans fondement, Paris, Le Cerf, 2008.

Abstract : For 50 years, ecology has been on the public policy agenda. Yet with what results? Everyone, right and left, now wants to «change the model». But are the best intentions enough? It's certainly important that our development is sustainable, and respects future generations. But we still have to be able to build sustainability into our very modes of production! Under the cover of time, the main factors would be transformed: capital becomes heritage, labor is devoted to maintenance, and technology serves as a protective envelope. Taking up the main themes of his latest book, Durer, Pierre Caye describes the tools for a global transformation of the production system.
